Information to keep in mind

During your stay from September 3rd to 7th, you'll enjoy the pleasant spring-like weather that characterizes this city. Temperatures are expected between 12°C and 25°C, with the possibility of rain, so it's recommended to bring light, but also waterproof, clothing.

Medellín operates under the Colombian time zone (UTC -5), with no changes for daylight saving time.

There is an iron and hairdryer in the rooms.

Regarding the exchange rate, the Colombian peso (COP) is the official currency, and it is recommended to check the updated exchange rate against the dollar or euro before making purchases.

Medellín is known for its hospitality, vibrant urban culture, and excellent selection of local fashion, jewelry, and design.

Information to keep in mind

In Colombia, the standard electrical voltage is 110 volts (V) alternating current (AC) at a frequency of 60 hertz (Hz). This is the most common voltage in homes and offices.

Tap water is safe to drink in Medellín. Empresas Públicas de Medellín (EPM), which provides water service in the city and the Aburrá Valley, guarantees that the water meets quality standards for human consumption without the need for additional filtration.

Colombia does not require yellow fever vaccination for entry into the country, although, since April 21, 2025, the Ministry of Transportation has issued a new mandatory measure for travelers traveling by road or river: all persons wishing to travel by land or river within Colombia must carry a yellow fever vaccination card or certificate. This provision applies to everyone and for all types of travel, whether by private car, bus, or boat.
